Huns Hurling New Robot Bomb At England

V-2 FASTER THAN SOUND, SOARS TO 70 MILE HEIGHT

Churchill Says No Method Yet Devised To Warn Public Of Danger

ATTACK ON FOR WEEKS

Scale, Effect Of Missile Not Significant, House Of Commons Told

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Germans have hurled two V-2 rocket bombs through the stratosphere against England for the last several weeks but the weapon has failed to cause the heavy damage which the Germans have claimed, Prime Minister Winston Churchill disclosed today.

The attacks to date by the missiles which soar 60 to 70 miles into the stratosphere before arcing on a downward course have been insignificant, the prime minister said.

Churchill declared that appropriate measures will be taken against launching sites but acknowledged that as yet no method had been devised to warn the public of impending danger from the swift-flying missile.

Faster Than Sound
The rockets have a speed faster than sound and therefore cannot be detected in the usual manner before the strike.

The V-2's, which the Germans have hailed as more devastating than the V-1 buzz bomb which harassed Southern England and the London area for months, landed in scattered parts of the country.

The prime minister's statement concerning the V-2's was the first official announcement that this type of bomb actually had been employed against Britain. The Germans had been making announcements for some time concerning their use against England.

A number of the new type missiles, Churchill said, landed at widely scattered points. Casualties and damage, however, were not heavy.

Churchill explained that the V-2 rocket contains approximately the same quantity of high explosive as the V-1 flying bomb but upon landing penetrates more deeply before exploding.

Damage Limited
The prime minister said the new missile caused somewhat heavier damage than the V-1 in the immediate vicinity of the crater torn into the landing point, but a less extensive blast in the surrounding area.

The rockets fly through the stratosphere, going into the sky to heights of 60 to 70 miles before taking a downward course, he said. The prime minister regretted that no reliable warning had yet been devised to inform the public.

Latins And Russ Split Over Peace

South Americans See No Reason To Scrap Nations League

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A basic difference of view developed today between the Latin American governments on the one hand and the Soviet government on the other, regarding the formation of an international security organization.

The differences developed following a meeting of Latin ambassadors at the state department for discussion of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. Some of the ambassadors frankly stated they saw no reason for scrapping the old League of Nations in favor of an entirely new organization.

This was directly in conflict with the Soviet view, as expressed in an official publication that the League of Nations was "born in sin," and that "nobody proposes the preservation or resurrection of the League of Nations."

The difference of view is accentuated by the fact that most Latin American governments do not recognize the Soviet government, and have not yet dispelled the impression that the Soviets seek to spread the communist doctrine through the rest of the world.

The issue was brought out by a document formally submitted by the government of Uruguay to the state department, giving its views in great detail on what the new security organization should be.

The outstanding point of this document, it was reported, was the proposal that the old League of Nations should not be scrapped. The same view was expressed less formally by several of the Latin American ambassadors in yesterday's discussion.

This came into conflict not only with the Soviet view, but also with the desire of United States officials to cast off the cloak of failure which still clings to the organization at Geneva, so that the new organization would be more acceptable to the American people.

A solution of this conflict has been seen in the possible retention of certain secondary activities such as control of white slave and opium traffic under the league, while the new organization will concentrate on problems of security.

This would conform to the Soviet view that:

"It would be much easier to observe the success or failure of an organization for security if it is not burdened with an endless number of superfluous functions."

PIPE SMOKERS NOW MAY START THEIR WORRYING

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Pipe smokers, who have stood by smugly during the mad scramble for cigarettes, are due for a rap right where it hurts—in the tobacco pouch—a survey among retail tobacco men indicated today. The retailers said the shortage looms because cigarette-hungry women have turned to pipes to satisfy their craving for tobacco. A check of loop tobacco stores showed that nearly 1,000 pipes have been sold to women for their own use in the last two weeks, with a special half-ounce job proving popular.

ONE EVANSTON WARD SURPRISES BY-FDR VOTE

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 10.—No one thought it ever would happen in Evanston, but a final tabulation of votes disclosed today that one of the city's eight wards had given a majority to President Roosevelt.

It was the first time in Evanston's history any ward had turned in a majority for a Democratic presidential candidate. It was the fifth ward that went contrary to all precedent, but it was a pretty narrow margin, at that, 2,202 for Mr. Roosevelt and 2,045 for Gov. Dewey.

WOMEN GAIN MORE SEATS IN THE LOWER HOUSE

Francis P. Bolton Margaret C. Smith Clare Boothe Luce Helen Gahagan Douglas

Mary T. Norton Jessie Sumner Emily Taft Douglas Edith Nourse Rogers

FEMININE REPRESENTATION in the next Congress has been increased as a result of the election. Nine, and possibly 10 women have won seats. Eight of them are pictured. Republican incumbents re-elected include Francis P. Bolton of Ohio, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, Jessie Sumner of Illinois and Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts. Democrat Helen Gahagan Douglas of California, wife of Actor Melvyn Douglas, has won a House seat. Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas of Illinois, another Democrat, also has won her first seat in the lower chamber. The veteran Democrat, Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, was re-elected. The ninth woman member of the new House will be Mrs. Chase G. Woodhouse, Connecticut Democrat, who defeated Republican incumbent. (International)

SILENCE ON V-2 IRKS BRITISH

Rigid Censorship Draws Criticism, Made Butt Of Island Joke

LONDON, Nov. 10.—If Nazi Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels thinks that he has England in a panic with his V-2 ghost bomb, he's way off the beam.

At this stage at least, the weapon has no military value whatever. It is purely an erratic terror weapon, but is not terrifying the country.

It is not causing nearly as many casualties or as widespread damage as the recent buzz bombs.

The unhealthiest feature of their advent was the official silence which Prime Minister Winston Churchill shattered today.

For security reasons, it obviously is impossible to say when or where the first V-2 hit, how many landed, or what parts of England have been under fire. These and similar facts must be kept under wraps until a time when they no longer can provide any comfort to the enemy.

The V-2's, however, strike the earth with terrific speed. Despite this, they cause less destruction than the V-1's.

When they first appeared, few

STALIN ASKED TO LONDON FOR ALLIED PARLEY

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia has been asked to visit London for a new conference with Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt, but so far has not accepted, although he has not refused either, the diplomatic writer of the London Daily Express said today.

Both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, it was pointed out, recognize the difficulties of such a meeting in the British capital since Stalin is in close control of the Soviet war effort. Therefore, it was believed, they will not press Stalin unduly to journey to London.

It was thought that probably the scene of the meeting would be shifted to the Middle East and take place within the next six weeks.

HERO FAMILIES ARE INVITED TO LOCKBOURNE

Families in Pickaway county and others of the Lockbourne area who have paid the supreme sacrifice in this war are invited to attend a special Memorial Service in the Lockbourne Army Air Base West Chapel Sunday at 2 p. m.

The program, announced today by Capt. U. L. Gibson, base chaplain, will begin with the presentation of the colors to be followed by the invocation by the Rev. Father Paul F. Small, acting auxiliary chaplain to the Catholic personnel at the base.

Also on the program is a message to the nearest of kin by Colonel Audrin R. Walker, deputy for training and operations at the base, and a concert of music by the Lockbourne band.

A minute of silent prayer and the sounding of taps will conclude the service.

SOLDIER VOTE GIVES JERSEY TO ROOSEVELT

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 10.—Analysis of New Jersey's election returns today showed that the soldier vote swung the state's six teen electoral votes to President Roosevelt.

With all votes counted except a part of the military ballot in Atlantic county, the returns gave the President a lead of 27,070 in combined votes and a lead of 30,620 in the soldier total. Without the servicemen's ballots, Dewey held a lead of 3,550.

SCHOOL BOOKS PREPARED FOR POST WAR REICH

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Anti-Nazi textbooks, designed for use in postwar German schools, today were being prepared by German scholars and educators who escaped to the United States after Hitler came to power.

The books, to be published by the anti-Hitler publishing firm of Bermann-Fischer Verlag, are expected to be available as soon as Germany is defeated and will cover the fields of literature, biology, history, geography and mathematics. Readers for elementary and high school students are now nearing completion.

JAP REAR GUARD FLEES YANKEES

Nips On Leyte Drop Food, Personal Gear, Showing Signs Of Panic

WITH SEVENTH DIVISION ON LEYTE, Nov. 10.—Jap soldiers with patched trousers dropped food, clothing and other personal gear as they fled their rear guard positions on the Buran-Dagami highway, giving the first evidence that Americans were pressing close enough to create panic in the Jap ranks.

They were still rear guard Japs, hampering the steady march to Damag as much as they could, but they were an overwhelmed rear guard. In the village of San Diego they clustered under Bambo houses, 20 or 30 under a house, deep in spider holes that left their heads a foot or two underground.

Strike Halts Trains On Electric Railroads Operating In Chicago

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—All trains of the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee and the Chicago, Aurora & Elgin electric railroads were at a standstill as the long-threatened strike of 600 operating employees on the two lines went into effect early today.

An estimated 75,000 commuters of Chicago's north shore and western suburbs, including war workers, were forced to scurry about for other transportation where it was available.

Both company and union officials were adamant in their positions at the outset of the strike and indicated the struggle would be long drawn out, barring federal intervention.

A spokesman for one of the railroads said:

"We have exhausted all legal machinery in efforts to settle the dispute and the government also has gone as far as it could."

John Zanger, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, declared:

"The strike is in force and it will stay in force till hell freezes over."

He added that only company compliance with the wage demands

LABOR READY TO PRESS NEW WAGE DEMANDS

Unions Will Insist On Repeal Of Legislation Restricting Strikes

ASK CONVERSION ROLE

Federal Postwar Control Of Production Also To Be Demanded

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—With the election concluded, organized labor prepared today to abandon its watchful-waiting attitude of the past weeks and renew publicly with even more vigor its demands for an upward revision in the nation's wage stabilization program.

First and foremost on the program for which labor will campaign briskly in the coming months is the wage issue. Other features are expected to include insistence on repeal of the Smith-Connally anti-strike act and demands for the establishment of reconversion and postwar production controls which will provide for effective labor participation.

George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, will fire the opening gun in the wage campaign in a nation-wide broadcast from Washington at 9:45 EWT Friday night. The AFL described Meany's scheduled radio appearance as "most important." He is one of two AFL members of the War Labor Board.

Fight Wage Formula
The CIO will continue in the fight to revise the "Little Steel" formula, although full scale renewal of its public campaign may await the organization's annual convention in Chicago, Nov. 20.

Meany is expected to again assail the delay of the WLB in submitting to President Roosevelt a special "fact finding" report on which the chief executive will base his ultimate decision in regard to the "Little Steel" yardstick.

The report is not yet completed and for nearly two weeks the WLB has devoted its attention to individual CIO wage cases, from which the AFL withdrew in protest, while awaiting the final report from WLB Chairman William H. Davis and other public members.

CIO In Accord
Agreeing with Meany on the score of delay, a CIO board member remarked:

"We are at the mercy of the public members."

Meanwhile, a WLB spokesman said that a companion document

FDR RECEIVES WELCOME HOME

President In Victorious, Jovial Mood, Back At White House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—President Roosevelt thanked a throng of Washingtonians for a "very wonderful welcome home" today in an extemporaneous address at Union Station before he began his triumphal procession to a fourth term in the White House.

In a victorious, jovial mood, the chief executive added he hoped that when he used the word "home" that newspapermen would not intimate that he intended to make Washington his "permanent" home for the rest of his life.

Mr. Roosevelt, seated before radio microphones in an open car, declared that he had formed a "great affection" for the capital during the eight years he spent in Washington as assistant secretary of the Navy under President Woodrow Wilson, the 12 years as President, "and now the four more years to come."

Mr. Roosevelt, flanked by Vice President Henry Wallace, and Vice President-Elect Harry S. Truman, who rode in the automobile with him, expressed his gratitude for the great contribution that government workers are making toward winning the war.

He expressed his thanks also, to all residents of Washington who contributed to the war effort by making it possible for government war workers to live in the capital.

President Roosevelt was met at his special train by virtually all the members of his cabinet, excepting only Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who is confined to Bethesda naval hospital with a throat ailment.

CITY OF METZ OUTFLANKED BY DRIVING YANKS

Main Highway Linking Nancy With Saarbrücken Cut By Third Army

FIGHT ON 50-MILE FRONT

At Least 23 Towns Taken As Nazis Offer Varied Degree Of Defense

By International News Service
Driving into strategic positions all along the 50-mile battle front in Eastern France, the American Third Army today outflanked the city of Metz and, at one point, smashed to within a few miles of the vital Saar basin and slashed the main highway linking Nancy with Saarbrücken.

The Germans were pushed from their highway stronghold at Chateau Salins as the doughboys drove forward all along a 50-mile battle-front in Eastern France in a fan-shaped offensive. Chateau Salins is 17 miles northeast of Nancy and was taken while forward elements carried to points within easy range of the Reich, according to front-line dispatches.

North of Metz, the Yanks completed establishment of substantial bridgeheads across the Moselle river. South of the strongly fortified city, elements of the Third Army pressed forward across a 20-mile front.

Approach Frontier

In the attacks to the north, one of the American units approached the German frontier northeast of Thionville. Driving forward in the area of Koenigsbach, this outfit was less than six miles below the town of Mettlach which is located in the Saar valley.

Seven divisions, including the fourth armored division, participated in the new offensive under direction of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton. Close support was given the ground troops by American tactical aircraft. Heavy bombers blasted enemy communications in the Metz area and some 700 supporting fighters harassed the Nazis with roaring strafing attacks.

General Patton's troops advanced from two to four miles on both sides of Metz. Rain and muddy terrain was an obstacle, but not a barrier to the driving Yank foot soldiers.

Tanks Face Thrust

The Fourth Armored division paced the thrust south of Metz. Mighty American tanks rolled into the attack through a heavy snowstorm, smashed Nazi defenses and advanced from the towns of Jallucourt and Malancourt two miles beyond to Oricourt and Leoncourt, 12 miles northeast of Nancy.

At least 23 towns have been seized by the Third Army since the new drive began. German defenses varied, but front line dispatches noted that the enemy failed to counter-attack or to employ armored units in an effort to halt the American advance.

Farther north on the Western Front, bitter fighting continued inside the Reich with the American First Army rolling the Germans back southwest of Hurtgen and west of Schmidt in the Hurtgen forest area. The Yanks also improved and consolidated their positions in the nearby town of Vossenack.

R. L. FLEMING SAVES SOLDIER, RECEIVES MEDAL

AT AN ADVANCED THUNDERBOLT AIRDRONE IN FRANCE, Cpl. Robert L. Fleming, son of Mr. Howard M. Fleming, box 382 Circleville, has received the Soldiers Medal Award presented to him by Brigadier General Gordon P. Seaville. Cpl. Fleming on June 7, 1944, while swimming at a beach in Italy heard the cries from a soldier who had been caught by a strong undertow and carried into deep water. Cpl. Fleming with disregard for his own safety made his way through the rough waters to the stricken soldier and towed his comrade to shore where he was soon revived by artificial respiration.

Cpl. Fleming entered the service in March, 1942.

sector, Allied troops seized the village of Deyfesse. The Germans in this area reinforced their lines, apparently in expectation of a fresh American thrust to coincide with General Patton's advances.

German resistance ceased on Walcheren island and on the approaches to the Moerdijk bridge across the Maas river in southwestern Holland on the northernmost flank of the Western Front.

Allies Take Forl

Along the Allied battle lines in Italy, British Eighth Army troops seized the town of Forl, a Nazi stronghold on the Bologna-Rimini road. Fall of the heavily defended town followed capture of the Forl airfield. Negro troops of the American Fifth Army, fighting on the western flank of the Allied line, occupied the towns of Azano, Terricina and Legliana in the coastal sector.

On the Eastern Front, Russian troops surged across enemy defenses northeast and south of the beleaguered city of Budapest. After crossing the Tisza river, northeast of the city, the Red Army moved to within a mile of the Budapest-Miskolc railway which links German forces in Hungary and Czechoslovakia. One report stated the Russians had crossed the Danube river and were fighting inside the Hungarian capital, but this was not confirmed.

In the last month, the German-Hungarian troops have lost nearly 150,000 men, including more than 100,000 killed, in the defense of Hungary, according to a Russian announcement.

From the Philippines, General Douglas MacArthur reported that his troops have made substantial gains in the battle for Ormoc, the last remaining Japanese strong hold on Leyte island. Troops of the 24th infantry have occupied two elevators overlooking the town and harbor of Ormoc and American artillery continued to shatter hastily constructed enemy defenses. General MacArthur estimated that some 35,000 Japanese troops, including heavy reinforcements, are pocketed in the Ormoc area.

The Japanese claimed to have raided Allied positions in the Halmahera islands, in the Admiralties and in Northern New Guinea. The Japanese claim was unconfirmed.

down historic Pennsylvania avenue, where the President had passed in three other triumphal processions, he waved his hand and grinned broadly at the wildly cheering crowds.

Mr. Roosevelt wore a battered felt hat and a raincoat, instead of the Navy cape he has chosen on other occasions.

When the President arrived at the White House, he was greeted warmly by members of his official staff.

Black skies and an uncomfortable November drizzle failed to dampen the enthusiasm of soldiers, sailors and civilians who thronged Union Station and the route to the White House, nor did they deter President Roosevelt from pausing briefly in the station plaza, as is his traditional custom, to greet the welcoming crowds.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who accompanied the President to Washington also participated in the parade. She rode in a closed car with her daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, and Mrs. Wallace, wife of the vice president.

Despite the inclement weather, the chief executive appeared in an open car, smiling broadly and waving to the close-packed multitude which lined the streets.

of the impending danger from the speedy new missiles.

Although it was impossible to warn the populace at the moment of attacks, he said "there is, however, no need to exaggerate the danger."

Hitherto, he explained, the scale and effects of the V-2 attacks have not been significant.

Some of the V-2 rockets had been fired from Walcheren island in the Scheldt estuary of Holland which now has been overrun by Allied forces he said.

"Other areas from where rockets have or could presently be fired will doubtless be overrun in due course," Churchill went on.

May Increase Range
"We cannot be certain the enemy will not be able to increase the range of the rockets," said Churchill who described the assaults "as another attempt by the enemy to attack the morale of the civil population."

Churchill said that no official information concerning the rocket attacks had been issued previously in order to prevent the giving of information which might be useful to the enemy.

He termed present German accounts of alleged destruction "highly colored . . . and an illustration of Germany's desperate need to afford the people some encouragement."

He promised "appropriate measures" would be taken against the rocket launching sites as and when they are discovered.

Huns Boastful
LONDON, Nov. 10.—First enemy reaction to Prime Minister Winston Churchill's commons statement on V-2 bombs today came from the Berlin radio which said:

"Today, ears are no more use to the Britishers, even if they strain them to the limit, as one cannot hear these missiles."

"The missiles come down from a great height and race quicker than sound."

"The world has been presented with an entirely new weapon. Hitherto every missile could be heard approaching, giving time to take cover. V-2 has changed all that."

"It is obvious that no defense can be put up as against the V-2."

HENRY BROWN, HIT BY CAR, IN FAIR CONDITION

Henry Brown, 54, South Scioto street, was in Berger hospital Friday in "fair" condition receiving treatment for injuries suffered when he was struck by a car Thursday at 6:45 p. m.

Police reported Brown was hit by an auto driven by Danny Louis, 40, Jackson, Ohio, at Ohio and Court streets.

According to the police report Brown, who is said to be partially deaf, apparently did not hear the car approaching and stepped in front of it. The driver told police when asked a lighted cigaret almost in front of the car.

Brown's head hit the side of the car at the windshield. He was removed to Berger hospital in a Mader ambulance and treated by Dr. D. V. Courtwright for concussion of the brain and a broken nose. He was slightly improved Friday morning.

tillery pieces through about 20 of these houses and then let his infantrymen prowl through the rubble to shoot the Japs in their holes.

"These Japs aren't fighting like they did on Attu," Hart, an accountant said. "Up there they really made it tough every foot of the way. Here they have good rear guard positions, but they aren't fighting hard from them."

"The natives tell us this outfit wasn't treated too well by the homeland. They rarely got a shipment of supplies. It became so bad the soldiers had to steal food and such things as plain cloth."

"When I heard that I remembered I'd seen some Japs with patches in the pants of otherwise fine uniforms. An army is getting pretty low in supplies when its soldiers have to patch their pants."

The highway from Burauen to Damag was an infantryman's paradise for a little while with soldiers lined shoulder to shoulder shooting at Japs who didn't shoot back.

The men on the road cut loose with machine guns, mortars and light artillery. Machine gun tracers cut their crazy pattern across the green meadow, plowing into the copse where there were three brown grass clumps. Mortars sent their heavy clouds of smoke up from behind the clumps. That was where the Japs had been seen last.

—the long-awaited cost-of-living report from a special presidential committee headed by Davis—probably will be ready for submission to the White House early next week. Mr. Roosevelt called for this study on war-time increases on living costs nearly a year ago when labor first instituted its drive for wage increases beyond "Little Steel."

Both CIO and AFL leaders have charged that cost-of-living has far outstripped war-time increases in earnings and now argue that the nation will face a buying power shortage when overtime ends and the 40-hour week comes back unless wages are adjusted upward at once.

"This buying power shortage could be made up by an average wage increase of about $250 per year for each of America's 40 million wage and small salaried workers, or 12 and one-half cents an hour for a 40-hour week throughout the year," an AFL economic report stated. "We must face this problem. We cannot have an adequate market without substantial wage increases."

Unfortunately, as the time approaches for ending the war, the struggle for political prestige and power between the parties has increased and this has made it more difficult than ever for the leaders to be willing to reach a compromise agreement. And furthermore, Gandhi and all Congress leaders, not to mention the fifty or sixty thousand Congress supporters, are in jail and, as Congress is the strongest political party, there is no one available to speak for it.)

PAUSE FOR SUPPLY
In former days, when fighting men and the animals which carried them could live off the land, problems of physical supply were few. Today Allied armies, at least, carry their food with them. Guns, ammunition and other supplies weigh thousands of tons, and all are transported by machines which in turn require tons of fuel to move them. Tides of advance rise and fall only as fast as the services of supply can function.

We have seen this happen in Normandy, when the apparent stalemate following the invasion turned out to be a pause to accumulate enough materiel to insure, as it did, possible advance clear across France. Today, all along the Allied front in Western Europe, armies build up stock piles and await the shorter supply lines which will come with the use of Antwerp.
Just such a lull will probably slow down, though not stop, the Philippine advance, once Leyte is taken, according to Admiral Mitscher.
"Americans have no idea," said the admiral, "of the amount of effort it takes to get food and other supplies out to the islands in the Pacific. It means a lot more shipping than we have available now. We will just have to cut a couple of extra holes in our belt."
Those at home can help by talking less about V-Day, and working harder for it.

NOTABLE NEWS ITEMS
TWO war comments lately have attracted special interest. One is that the Russian army in its big summer offensive has killed or captured about 800,000 Germans, bringing the total German war casualties to about 8,650,000. Germany cannot stand that drain much longer.
The other comment concerned Herr Hitler. London, which is not much given to mere international gossip, reported that a brain specialist had been called for Hitler in his secret hide-out near Berchtesgaden. Most Americans will probably say that Hitler should have got that specialist long ago. By now it is probably too late.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

ANOTHER PHILLIPS LETTER

WASHINGTON — Ambassador William Phillips, President Roosevelt's former personal representative in India, wrote not merely one, but two very critical letters to FDR regarding British policy in India, urging Indian independence.
The first letter, published exclusively in this column last July, caused Phillips to be recalled from London, where he was serving as political adviser on the staff of General Eisenhower. The British Government was boiling mad and burned up the cables to Washington.
At that time, the British Foreign Office asked Phillips whether he still entertained the views regarding India he had expressed to the President. Phillips replied that he certainly did, but that he hoped another report he had made to the White House would not leak out.
It is now possible to give the American public the text of Ambassador Phillips' other report. In it he proposed that President Roosevelt, Stalin, King George, and Chiang Kai-shek sponsor a joint conference of Indian leaders to settle Indian problems, arrange for independence and get India to play a real part in the war.
In his previously published report, Phillips informed Roosevelt: "The present Indian army is purely mercenary. General Stilwell has expressed his concern over the situation and in particular in regard to the poor morale of the Indian officers."

IMPETUS TO WAR

In this report published below, Phillips pointed a finger at Prime Minister Churchill. "I should imagine that the Viceroy and Churchill," he said, "are well satisfied to let the deadlock remain as long as possible."
It has long been reported that Churchill has flatly refused to discuss Indian political disturbances which have held back the war in Burma.
Meanwhile, Phillips said, "The Indians are caught in the new idea which is sweeping over the world, of freedom for oppressed peoples. The Atlantic Charter has given the movement great impetus. Your speeches have given encouragement."

Phillips made his report a year ago last spring, while he was still in India. But the bogging down of the Burma campaign for one full year, plus Stilwell's trouble in China, plus the recent loss of another U. S. air base in China, all have caused Roosevelt advisers to study anew Phillips' plan for giving a military and political impetus to this far-behind-schedule theatre of war.
Many advisers agree with Phillips that, since we are largely equipping the Indian Army and since Britain will only play a "token" part in the war against Japan, India is "our business."
Because of its importance, the Phillips letter to Roosevelt follows:

PROBLEM OF GHANDI

"Dear Mr. President:—Gandhi has successfully completed his fast and the only result of it has been increasing bitterness against the British from large sections of the people. The Government has handled the case from the legalist point of view. Gandhi is the 'enemy' and must not be allowed to escape from his just punishment and at all cost Britain prestige must be maintained.
"Indians look at it from a different angle. Gandhi's followers regard him as

TREATMENT OF PARASITES

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

MY MAIL contains an average of three letters a day asking for the treatment of pinworms. And although I have written on the subject many times I will repeat

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

here for the benefit of those many interested persons.

It should be said at the outset that there is no excuse for having pinworms. We know what they are, where they come from, and we have late and improved methods of treating them.

The pinworm, or thread worm, is the smallest worm which acts as a human intestinal parasite. It can be seen by the naked eye, however, and is readily identified because the name thread worm describes it—it looks like the snip-pings of white thread. It occurs almost exclusively in children. It inhabits the lower small intestine, especially the appendix and rectum. It develops in enormous numbers.

Very Annoying Ailment

It seldom causes any serious disease, although cases have been reported of sufficient numbers accumulating in the appendix to cause symptoms resembling appendicitis. But while no serious disease is attributable to the infestation they can be very annoying because at night the worms wander out from the bowel and cause great irritation and itching of the skin. Widespread inflammation of the folds of skin around the buttocks is the result, and the scratching may infect it. The parasites usually come out at night and may be seen on the bed clothes. Then they wander back into the bowel. For this reason part of the treatment is to change the bed clothes every night and boil the sheets separately from other washing. They do not breed in the human intestine, but their breeding places attract flies and other insects and these light on exposed fruit and leave the ova on the outer skin and rind. The prevention is, hence, very simple—to wash all fruit and vegetables with very hot to scalding water before putting it in the icebox or serving.

The treatment is effective, but requires patience. The latest drug used for pinworm infestation is phenothiazine. It is given in dosage of about three grains a day for seven days. For children it can be mixed in oatmeal. Adults usually find no difficulty in swallowing capsules of it.

Gentian Violet Treatment

The older classical treatment was with gentian violet (methylrosaline). It is given in the dose of ten milligrams to children three times a day for eight days. Adults can take larger doses at the same intervals and for the same length of time. No alcoholic beverages should be used while the treatment is going on. It may cause some nausea in children.

Gentian violet should be given in capsules, especially capsules with an enteric coating, which do not dissolve until they are in the intestines. For children too young to swallow capsules, gentian violet is a poor method of treatment because when given in solution it is bound to stain the mouth, lips and tongue. It can be given, however, by enema and is quite effective in that form.

The entire eight day treatment must be repeated three times in succession and then every three weeks for some time. The worms are very resistant and stubborn. They are small enough to bury themselves in a fold of the bowel wrapped up in a ball of mucus where the medicine cannot get at them. Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from pinworms, and at the first sign of their return the whole treatment must be gone over again.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

V. M.:—What are the symptoms of diabetes?

Answer: Diabetes is the best example of a disease which is likely to progress for some time without symptoms. Such symptoms as do occur are likely to go unnoticed because they are not too troublesome—thirst, loss of weight, and increased urination. Sometimes it comes on with pain—neuritis—or sudden coma.

R. A. K.:—On the chart the nurse gave me when I took my baby home from the hospital was "Abnormal findings: Possible atelectasis." What does that mean? He was an eight pound boy delivered by forceps.

Answer: I am surprised the nurse wrote that down. Atelectasis is a temporary condition. When the baby is born its lungs are collapsed because it has not been living in air surrounded by water. If this collapse is hard to overcome at first it is called atelectasis. But it was completely overcome or you wouldn't have taken the baby home.

D. J. B.:—What test is used to determine scrofula? What is the treatment? Can any doctor find it or is it necessary to go to a specialist?

Answer: Scrofula is tuberculosis of the lymph nodes in the neck. A tuberculin skin test would help in diagnosis, also removal of one gland for microscopic examination. Surgical removal is the best treatment. However, it is a rare disease nowadays and most enlarged glands in the neck are due to chronic tonsillitis.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"But you told everybody it was accident..." began Soper explosively and Nugent broke in with, "Who shot you?"
Craig closed his eyes wearily. "I could have told you all I knew of it yesterday if I hadn't been drugged so thoroughly."
"The girl had the revolver, too!" emphasized District Attorney Soper.
"Mr. Conrad Brent wasn't shot," said Nugent.
"Craig was shot—"

"Miss Cable was not here when I was shot," interjected Craig.
Soper paid no attention to that. He said, "How do we know she's telling the truth about the revolver?"
"Why did she keep it, in that case?" queried Craig.
"Why, to clean off her fingerprints! Or perhaps she was excited. Left it in her room when she went to get the digitals and forgot it. We found it; she had to explain it. And also she saw a chance to throw dust in our eyes; to suggest that Craig's accident was attempted murder and thus, that the person who shot Craig and the person who killed Conrad were the same."

"No, no," protested Drue. "I didn't..."
"I can corroborate Miss Cable's story of the revolver," I broke in hastily. "Or at least part of it. But when I had told them of seeing her return to the house from the direction of the garden they were not very much impressed."

"Could you see what she was carrying?" asked Nugent.
"No, she was wearing her cape."

"So you didn't see that it was a revolver?"
"Not exactly. It had to be something small."

"But in fact you are not sure she carried anything?"
"Let's get back to your accident," said Nugent abruptly, addressing Craig. "Did somebody shoot you? If so, who?"

"This is what happened. I was walking in the garden; it was dark, no moon. There was a rustle in some shrubs. I turned around, thinking it was the dog. I stepped a little nearer the shrubs; anyway, I could see a hand. Barely see it, the rest was in the shadow; I think there were outlines of a figure. And then something hit my shoulder, as if somebody had given me a kind of hard slap. I realized I'd been shot. I think I started for the shrub; I must have called for help. I remember stumbling and then that was all until they were carrying me upstairs. Bevens and Pete. Then Chivley came."

"But I didn't see anybody clearly in the shrub; I just knew somebody was there. I didn't even really see the revolver," he said. "But I imagine that Miss Cable found it and that that is the revolver she had in her room. I asked her to try to find it; I had a kind of lucid moment, the way you do when you're drugged. I asked her to look for it. Naturally I wanted to know who shot me; I wanted the evidence."

Soper's cold little eyes practically lost themselves in suspicious wrinkles. "That's not Miss Cable's story. She didn't say you sent her to look for the revolver."

"Craig shot a glance at Drue. "Didn't she?" he said imperturbably. "Well, that's the way it was." Nugent remarked, "The revolver belonged to your father."

"He kept it," said Craig, accepting the fact of the revolver's ownership without question, "in the desk in the library. He never looked the desk; anything valuable he put in the safe. The safe is behind one of those panels in the library."

"You mean anybody might have taken the revolver," said Soper. "Obviously."

Nugent was looking thoughtful. He said, "Was the hand you saw wearing a glove?"

"I haven't the faintest idea. There was only a kind of white outline."

Soper said, "So you think the same person that killed your father tried first to kill you?"

"I don't know," answered Craig. "But I do know Miss Cable was in New York when I was shot."

"How do you know that?"
"Obviously she wasn't here," Lieutenant Nugent said abruptly. "It's all right, Mr. Soper. She was in New York; I checked that and the telephone call to the Nurses' Registry office."

Craig went on quickly, "In any case, it isn't likely that she would take a pot shot at me one night and the next night poison my father because she wanted to see me and he opposed it. The motives seem mixed."

After a pause, Craig added, "She had no motive to kill my father. She doesn't want to marry me any more than I want to marry her."

"Do you mean to say," asked Soper, glancing in Drue's direction, "do you mean to say that if Drue Cable, your former wife, came to you and suggested that you re-marry, you would refuse her?"

"At the risk of sounding uncharitable," Craig said coolly and distinctly, "yes."

At that point, I declared, "Time's up! The patient must rest."

Instantly Nugent stalked toward the door. But Soper said, "Your father was a rich man, Mr. Brent. What are the main provisions of his will?"

"You'll have to ask his lawyer, John Wells. Are you going to re-lease Miss Cable?"

District Attorney Soper turned a fine magenta. "Release her! No! She stays here under guard or in jail."

"But I need her," I said quickly. "I need her to help me nurse Mr. Brent."

"You can get another nurse," snapped Soper. "She stays under guard or in jail."

Well, I didn't want another nurse; Anna could give me any help I needed. Nugent drew me into the hall. "Miss Keate," he said in a low voice, "Who was here in the hall last night? When something bumped against the door and you went to look?"

"Why—why, no one! That is, oh, some time (perhaps half an hour before) I saw Nicky in the hall. But not after the bump on the door. There's a dent—here," I put my finger on it and he looked at it.

Something very queer in his eyes stopped me. But he said only, "I advise you to tell me. Think it over," and went away.

When I entered his room again, Craig was lying with his eyes closed. Trooper Wilkins advanced a little toward Drue who was still at the window. "Wait outside," I told him, and with an uncertain look he did so and I closed the door after him.

"Are they gone?" Craig asked. "Yes." And then I said slowly, "There was a glove on the hand, wasn't there?"

His eyes flared open. He looked very straight at me for a long moment. Then he said definitely, "I don't know what you're talking about."

Which was about what I might have expected.

"All right. I can't make you tell me. But there's one thing you'll have to explain, if not to me, then to the police. You said—half asleep yesterday—'there'll be murder done. Tell Cloud.' What did you mean?"

He looked at me through half-shut eyes whose expression I couldn't read. And he denied it flatly.

I don't remember it. I could have meant anything. Unless I was referring to the still upon me. Go ahead and tell the police."

"I will," I said. And Drue whirled around. Her hands were doubled up, her crimson mouth tight.

"Craig, you needn't have lied for me!" she cried.

"I didn't," he said. "You didn't send me for the revolver..."

"Oh," responded Craig, "that. But the rest of it was the truth, wasn't it? I mean, you didn't come here with the intention of—of—" he smiled a little, though his eyes were very intense—"of a reconciliation? I'm sure you didn't. The smile left his lips, but his eyes were still very intense, watching Drue.

"It's something neither of us wants. That's why I told them."

And at that instant Trooper Wilkins knocked on the door. He looked apologetic when I opened it. But Drue had to go with him all the same.

When the door closed behind her, Craig closed his eyes and lay very quiet. Eventually I bestirred myself to my duties. Craig was really on the mend, in spite of occurrences which, certainly, were not exactly conducive to convalescence. He was unexpectedly docile, while I gave him a quick sponge bath and an alcohol rub, got him into fresh pajamas and took a look at the dressing on his wound.

One-Minute Test

1. Lachrymatories are often found in ancient tombs; what are they?

2. Are whiskers necessary to a cat or purely ornamental?

3. Who was the first physician to make observations on his patients' mental states?

Words of Wisdom

God has commanded time to console the unhappy.—Joubert.

Hints on Etiquette

Don't greet your husband or wife (if you are a man) by telling how tired you are. She may be tired, too, and it won't help her—or you—to hear about your woes. Try to be soothing.

Today's Horoscope

If this is your natal day, you are a person who likes to lead and will not take a secondary position if you possibly can help it. You are very public spirited and quite philanthropic. You love travel, reading and music. You should marry someone who is sympathetic toward your broad interests. A happy, fortunate and interesting year is before you. Business will rapidly expand; successful travel and changes are foreseen. Deal with property and legal matters. Born on this date a child will be somewhat erratic and fault-finding, but highly successful, and should attain prominence. Law, real estate, insurance and medicine and science are exceptionally well signified.

One-Minute Test Answers

1. Vases, so-called from the idea that tears were collected in them. 2. They are necessary to the animal because they are delicate sense organs, helping the cat to find its way about. 3. Hippocrates.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE
By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

FORBEARANCE A VIRTUE

THERE ARE spots in bridge where you must have the nerve to control yourself and refrain from what offhand looks like the natural play. Sometimes you have to duck a particular trick, hoping your partner has a particular card, as otherwise your cause is lost. Careful analysis of the apparent situation can sometimes guide you in just what to do.

A lot of duplicate pairs got into the heart small slam on this deal, some with South as the declarer, some with North. Some made it, some failed. Most got a club lead to the A. And the ensuing tricks were the heart Q, J and A, club Q, K and 7. Then at the eighth trick came the vital differences. One declarer finessed the spade Q to the K and later lost the setting trick to the diamond K. The others tried a lead-throwing end-play.

One led the diamond 7 to the A on the tenth trick and next the diamond 10, putting West in with the K. A diamond return would have produced a ruff and discard.

so West led a spade into South's tenace, enabling him to make the contract.

At one table South tried the same thing, but West had the nerve to play low on the diamond, hoping East had the Q. He did, and returned a spade, setting it.

At another table, the diamond J was led on the eighth trick from North, the Q covering and the A winning. Then West was put in with the K, compelling him to make a return which would give South his contract.

When both sides used the best tactics, the diamond J was led from dummy on the eighth trick to tempt a cover, but East restrained himself and played low. After South used the A and then put forth the 10, West had acumen enough to realize why East had not covered, played low, and let East win the trick with the Q, his spade return beating South.

Inside WASHINGTON

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Presidents, potentates and heroes are charging and clamping all over the hemispheres in these war times. Now and then you hear somebody mention a king.

Yes, the word is "king" though it does have the comic adjectives "poor little" plumed on as decorations of the times. Indeed, I had almost forgotten there were such creatures about as kings until I heard the almost extinct race referred to three times the other day.

Once by the state department which almost mentions nothing at all except in such concise language as "much can be said on both sides." Or "Information conveyed to the department seems to point to the fact that unless further developments nullify the knowledge already believed to be authentic, there is a strong likelihood that—"

To return—the word or the species "king" was discussed a second time by a person in a pulpit. The third time the once-thrilling title was spoken by a lady aged 13 whom I met in front of the bear dens at the zoo.

Said the state department man, "I'm beginning to believe, as I listen to the representatives of foreign countries now in Washington, that there will be very little royalty left anywhere after this war."
"You mean that the royalties haven't earned their truffles and tiaras lately and so they deserve to be pushed back into an age—say with the Ichthyosaurs?"

"Don't be facetious," said the state department man, going pontifical. "I'm speaking seriously. It isn't what the royalties deserve or what happens to them that is disturbing most of their clear thinking subjects. The question I hear booted around is whether or not royalty is good for any country. In most of the occupied countries it has been proved lately that royalty has definitely not that stabilizing effect it is assumed to have. Ergo (state department language) why should people who have barely escaped with their lives be burdened with the clasp trap of ermine and crown jewels and not too intelligent princelings who fancy themselves at least semi-divine?"

"But if the not-too-intelligent princelings are merely figureheads? With no power? Sort of super movie stars to entertain the populace, what then?"

"I'm sure I'm in no position to talk as I do." The state department man drew a blank over his face. Shut out his thoughts as you drop a venetian blind to shut out the light. "But I'll say this much. If those meandering King Carols and Prince Ottos and such ever get back to their thrones to stay, then the promised perfection of the world is just simple boloney."

"Pronounce the word 'Bo-loney.' Now that our troops have got to the spot in Italy where the stuff came from," I said, and left the careless fellow where he stood beside the statue of Odysseus in the Mayflower lobby.

The Parson who discussed kings from the pulpit had been talking solemnly of the King of Heaven. "He is a King who will always endure." Unexpectedly, the parson changed his tone, jumped from his priestly role in voice and manner to: "As for the kings of the earth. They won't last much longer. In any country. The people are getting them out as fast as they can. Today it is the people who rule."

Royalty came into the conversation the third time very prettily in my zoological park talk with young America. So prettily that I was almost persuaded to enjoy the breed again.

"We have two princesses, royal princesses, in our dancing class," said young America who happens to be a member of Mrs. Shippen's "elegant little group." I mean Princess Astrid and Princess Ragnil. They live out in Bethesda with their mother, Princess Martha. I think that's what her name is. Anyhow their grandfather is a king. I think he's the king of Norway. Anyhow it's one of those countries way up there on the map.

"Sure I like 'em. Only they're so polite. They make us have better manners. Every time they meet anybody they curtsy and shake hands. And our mother says, 'Why can't you behave like those princesses?'"

Makes it kinda hard. . . . Though I do like the kids. They always come to the dancing class in long white dresses. . . . Certainly they don't wear crowns. . . . What do you think they are anyhow? They've got little chains with crosses around their necks. Sure they wear gold slippers. But not very gold."

33 TIGERS GO TO WASHINGTON FOR FINAL GAME

Squad In Good Shape For Contest Set For 8 O'Clock Tonight

Circleville high school football players Friday were all set for their last game of the season, to be played Friday night at Washington C. H.

Coach Roy Black and about 33 members of the Tiger squad were to leave the high school about 5 p. m. for Washington. The contest is scheduled to start at 8 p. m.

Despite the fact that Washington has lost seven games this season quite a few Circleville fans planned to follow the team. Rivalry between the two schools has been intense for years and the Blue Lions will be keyed to their highest pitch for the game.

Coach Black reports his squad apparently is in good shape for their final game.

About the regular lineup, with the exception of Dave Gillis, who is now in service, will start against the Blue Lions, Coach Black said.

EDSTROM SAYS OLYMPICS CAN BE REVIVED IN 1948

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—J. Sigfrid Edstrom of Sweden acting chairman of the International Olympic committee expressed the belief today that the Olympic games could be held in 1948. He said possibly Finland would be out of the war by that time and could organize the games but that if Finland was prevented by circumstances, Switzerland, Spain, Sweden or Portugal might act as host.

"It is stipulated," Edstrom who is in New York for an international business conference, "that a city in a country at war may not organize the games. What countries will be out of the war by 1948? This question will be put before the International Olympic committee when it meets, perhaps in 1945."

TO DRAFT DRAFT BOARDS

NEW YORK—New York draft boards are to be drafted to aid in the sale of war bonds in the Sixth War Loan drive, according to F. W. Gehle, state chairman of the War Finance Committee. During the Fifth War Loan more than 200 of the city's 280 local boards sent letters to families of service men urging the purchase of bonds.

George Bailey, Freeport, Pa., a guest of James I. Smith, gave Rotarians a demonstration of why he is known as a memory expert by calling everyone present by name after he had been told the names.

At the meeting it was announced the Rotary Ann party will be held December 7.

25,000 TO SEE OSU-PITT GAME

Willis, Appleby, Cline To Watch Contest From The Sidelines

COLUMBUS, Nov. 10.—Only 25,000 fans, the smallest Ohio Stadium crowd of the season, were expected for tomorrow's game between a rather tamed Pitt Panther and Ohio State's Scarlet Scourge.

The Pitt squad was to arrive in Columbus early this afternoon and was to run through its signals on the turf in the huge horseshoe stadium later in the day.

Ohio State, undefeated and untied in six games and probably the nation's top civilian football team, is an overwhelming favorite to trample the Panthers. In view of this factor, Buck Coach Carroll Widows probably will not start Bill Willis or Gordon Appleby, star tackle and center, who have been ailing but have reached playing form again. Widows will rest them for the crucial games with Illinois and Michigan, which the Bucks must win for an undefeated season.

Ollie Cline, ailing fullback, who was injured in last Saturday's win over Indiana and rushed to the hospital, was back in uniform, but also will remain on the sidelines throughout the game, Widows indicated.

MEMORIAL LAKE EXPLAINED TO ROTARY CLUB

The memorial lake project for Pickaway county was explained to Rotarians at their regular meeting Thursday noon in Pickaway Arms by Louis H. Mena, chairman of the Pickaway Farmers' and Sportsmen's association lake committee.

He outlined the many advantages of the proposed lake which is to be located in the Devil's Back Bone area. He said state officials claim this is the best park and lake site in Ohio. Mr. Mena described the specifications of the proposed lake and predicted it would become a recreation center for everyone.

It would offer a camp site for 4-H clubs, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other organizations and provide a place to swim, fish and picnic for everyone, he pointed out.

George Bailey, Freeport, Pa., a guest of James I. Smith, gave Rotarians a demonstration of why he is known as a memory expert by calling everyone present by name after he had been told the names.

At the meeting it was announced the Rotary Ann party will be held December 7.

MILES VISITS HALL
Jackie Miles, newest comedy star, is scheduled to appear on the Radio Hall of Fame Sunday, in the company of such stars as Charles Boyer, Carole Landis, Diana Lynn and the Delta Rhythm Boys. Miles replaces Victor Borge.

JAP SHIP LOGS IN ENGLISH
Because their own language is too cumbersome and ineffect for nautical records, the Japanese navy and merchant marine are obligated to use their hated enemy's language, English, for ship's logs, according to one of the unusual stories to be dramatized on "Keep Up With The World," Sunday. Back in 1872 a defeated presidential candidate not only failed to win the election but even failed to have his name placed before the convention, yet he was a huge success on one score. He emerged considerably wealthier than when he entered the presidential race. By comparing admission to his campaign speeches, the politician cleared the handsome profit of $80,000.

FRANK FAY GUEST
Frank Fay, the comedian who just opened on Broadway in the leading role of the new play, "Harvey," will be Charley McCarthy and Edgar Bergen's guest Sunday. Fay's persuasive performance of man who is devoted to an imaginary white rabbit has brought him a round of applause from New York theatre critics. The fabulous rabbit supposedly stands six feet and one and a half inches tall, however, he never appears on stage. It's Charlie's plan to persuade the actor to bring the fantastic rabbit "Harvey" to the program.

RADIO NEWS NOTES
Dinah Shore's program now ranks second to the one-and-only Bing Crosby's in popularity of shows built around singers, according to a recent survey. The poll rated them: Crosby, Shore, Sinatra, Ginny Simms, Grace Fields, Kate Smith, Mary Small, Hildegard, Dick Haymes and John Charles Thomas.

Kay Kyser and his "College of Musical Knowledge" are scheduled to fly to Chicago to participate in the opening of the Navy's Sixth War Loan Drive exhibit there.

"Steel Horizons," heard Sunday's, continues to uphold the reputation it has won as a "good luck" program for the young guest soloists who sang on it. Soprano Margherita Piazza, as soloist last Sunday (Nov. 5) met with such success that she was scarcely off the air when she received the news that she would sing one of the leading roles in the New York City Center production of "The Gypsy Baron" instead of a smaller part for which she had been previously scheduled.

By law, contestants under 18 years of age are not permitted to participate in quiz programs—but a two-year-old was a $32 winner on a recent "Take It Or Leave It" broadcast! A sailor, competing on the Phil Baker quiz, floundered on the $32 question, and so Baker went to the $64 question, reminding the gob, "When your son William grows up, tell him that you owe him $32."

A new sensation in the opera world is Margaret Harshaw, young Metropolitan Opera contralto who will be guest soloist Sunday, Nov. 12 on "World of Song." Miss Harshaw made her debut with the San Francisco Opera Company during their recent season as America's in "Aida" and later in the season sang leading contralto roles in "Salome" and "Faust" and was

New Radio At Lockbourne Aids Fortresses In Flight

WEATHER DATA, BEARINGS SENT OUT TO PLANES

Station In Touch With All Long Flying Craft—One Of Few In Nation

Wherever the B-17's of Lockbourne Army Air Base fly today, they're always more or less at home, whether the destination be Florida, Texas, New York or California.

Reason for this is that the base now has in operation a brand new radio ground station set up on the flight line that maintains communication with its ships on all cross-country and circle flights.

In operation 24 hours a day, the new station can also receive and relay messages from other ships to their home station thereby keeping in touch with every Army installation in the country.

The radio station supplies weather information every half hour and broadcasts bearings to lost planes. Messages are usually sent in code, but voice can be used in case of an emergency.

Antennae masts above an old supply building identify the site of the station where the radio operators are taught code and the blinkers light system used by ships for signalling purposes.

The code teaching is done by Miss Dorothy Collins of 455 Oak Street, a graduate of the Fort Hayes Radio School, in a big classroom adjacent to the nine by 15 foot studio.

Six enlisted men operate the station under the supervision of Capt. R. W. Boles of Sacramento, Calif., and Lt. Jack L. Deets of Opportunity, Wash., base and assistant base communications officers.

Non-commissioned officer in charge is T/Sgt. Ernest J. Kiss of Jersey City, N. J., a combat returnee who successfully completed 25 missions as a radio operator in the European Theatre of Operations before coming to Lockbourne.

Assisting Kiss are S. Sgt. Benjie F. Swilley of Greenville, Mass., Pfc. George Papp of Cleveland, Pfc. Alton Smith of Hartford, Conn., Pvt. James Stubbelfield of St. Louis, Mo. and Pvt. Joseph Thomas of Chicago, Ill.

Swilley and Papp are radio engineers who do the fixing when there is "fixin" to be done around the radio station and Smith, Stubbelfield and Thomas are graduates of the Army Air Forces Radio

School at Scott Field, Ill.

There are few air bases in the country which can boast of a radio station like the one at Lockbourne. It is under the jurisdiction of the Air Communications Office in Washington, D. C.

Its call letters?—They're a military secret.

DIVORCE FILED

Two new divorce cases have been filed in common pleas court. Creed I. Stonerock charges extreme cruelty and gross neglect in his suit against Mildred L. Stonerock. Gross neglect is charged by Charles W. Smith in his suit against Bessie Dade Smith.

WALNUT SCHOOL CHILDREN TO GIVE OPERETTA

An operetta, "Rumpelstiltskin," will be given by the fourth, fifth and sixth grade pupils of Walnut township school Wednesday night.

The operetta is under direction of Miss Dana Mary Poling, music instructor at the school.

The operetta is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. in the school auditorium.

EX - CIRCLEVILLE FATHER AND SON BOTH IN NAVY

Two former Circleville residents now make up a father-son combination in the U. S. Maritime Service.

When William List, 17, took his Maritime Service enrollment papers to his father, Bernard List, 41, for his signature, he persuaded the senior List to join with him. They trained together at the U. S. Maritime Service Training Station, Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., and shipped out together.

Bernard is a graduate of Circleville high school and Bliss business college. He formerly worked at Cussins and Fearn store here and was linoleum mechanic for the B. & T. Carpet and Linoleum company in Columbus.

William attended high school at Marysville and was working at the Curtis-Wright plant in Columbus when he joined the maritime service.

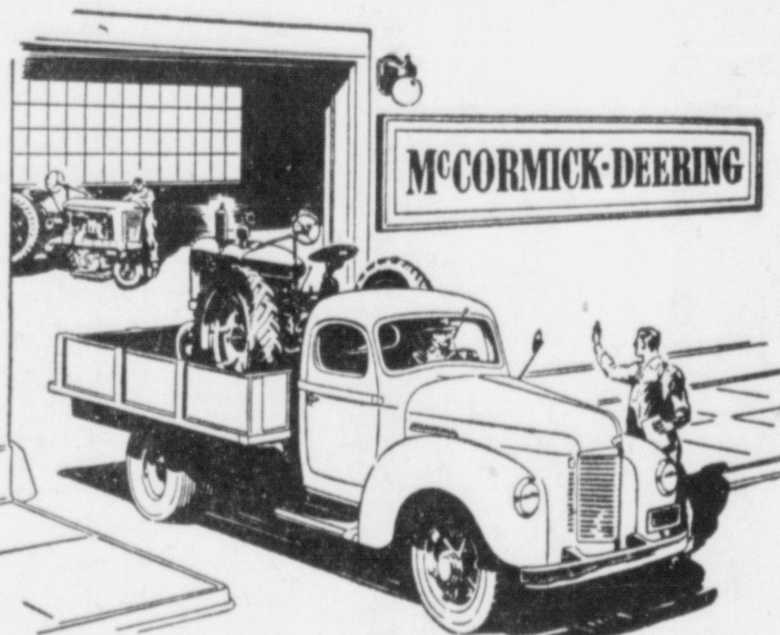

500 PRESENT AT PARTY STAGED BY ESMERALDA

Esmeralda Canning company was host Thursday night to about 500 growers of crops used at the plant.

Music was furnished by the Adelphi band and an old-time string band from Tarlton. George Bailey, Freeport, Pa., memory expert, magician and musician also entertained the crowd. Fish and pumpkin pie were the main dishes of the refreshments served. James I. Smith, Jr., manager of the plant, was in charge of the event.
